Terry Isaac is a northwest native who recently moved from the Willamette Valley to British Columbia, Canada. He is a master of wildlife and landscape painting.

He is an admirer of 19th century painters Thomas Moran and Albert Bierstadt, who painted the dramatic light and landscapes of the West. Terry, painting predominantly in acrylics, strives to capture not only the characteristics of his wildlife subjects but also the light that surrounds them, taking great care to depict both his subjects and their habitats with accuracy.

Because of his accuracy and attention to detail, Terry consistently places high in state and national fish and waterfowl stamp and print competitions. Terry says these competitions have sharpened his skills and have given him the opportunity to compete with the finest wildlife artists in North America.
