The objective of this class is to share the technique of acrylic gel transfer collage with other artists. Another name for this practice could be paperless collage, because the use of acrylic gel to embed the ink of a photo copy, enables the artist to remove the paper backing and combine the transferred image with other media.

The course will cover the basic practice of making a transfer, including selection of image, layering the acrylic gel, and the removal of the paper backing. We will then explore the uses of the created transfers as elements in paintings or other artworks. The first week I will demonstrate making an acrylic background, preparing a gel and integrating it into a painting. The second week I will assist the participants in making their own gels and beginning artworks using the gels. The 3rd week will continue these projects, begin additional works for those who choose to, and discuss more advanced techniques for future exploration.

Supplies needed:

wide flat brush to layer the gel medium, a small jar of acrylic gel medium (gloss or matte), illustration board or a similar surface, a sponge, and xerox photo copies or black and white laser prints to make their transfers from, acrylic paint and/or whatever other materials the student wishes to include in the project.
