Susan Lehman mixes provocative imagery and subtle textures creating multi-layered collages. Her vast understanding of color and design was deepened while studying textile arts at California College of Arts and Crafts. Each collage tells a story, creates a mood, weaving the tapestry of her life together on paper. Environmental concerns predominate in many works. Bits and pieces of handmade paper, scraps of recycled materials -- often picked up from the street -- rusted pieces of metal and images gathered from a myriad of printed media reflect urban challenges. Transferred images are covered by multiple layers of translucent rice paper and tissue. Transparent glazes of fine metallics and rich colors of fluid acrylic are added, allowing images and script to peek through revealing the story.

In this workshop, Susan will demonstrate her skills, and share her knowledge and experience of story telling with collage. She will teach you to select interesting elements to include in your composition, and integrate them with a strong sense of color and design.
